
ABSTRACT

Software architecture comprising site agent components, browser components, transaction device driver components and user interface components, contained within the same object model, for customising self-service kiosk functionality in response to the download of web pages. One of several site agents components can be selected by a user and site agents can act to alter web sites, display alternative content and drive remote web sites.